

What Dyspeptics Should Eat
A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are due to some one of two causes: either the stomach is unable to digest food that is sent to it, or the food is not properly prepared for digestion. In the former case, the food is not properly prepared for digestion. In the latter case, the food is not properly prepared for digestion. $6,000 MANAGER SAYS COCKTAILS LED TO DOWNFALL

White, Who Confessed at Trial, Says He Got Only $300 Out of Holdup.

HIS WIFE TO AID HIM.

Believed to the Very Last He Was Innocent of the Crimes Charged.

A state of emotional exaltation—"peace" he calls it—has come upon Philip Tottiver White in the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, since his confession in open court that while he was a respected $6,000 a year business man by day, he plotted robbery at night. White was formerly sales manager for John W. Masury & Son, paint manufacturers, in Brooklyn, and was indicted for complicity in a robbery of $5,032 on June 5 last. He was sentenced next Wednesday.

"It was the luncheon cocktail that started my downfall," White said today in his cell. "I had been a poor boy and fought my way up. In 1904 I got my first big chance. I was with a New York auditing company, getting $5,000 a year, and I was placed in charge of 100 experts who were detailed to go over the books of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It was to meet charges of the Interstate Commerce Commission and was probably the largest auditing job ever undertaken."

"I was successful and when I came back to New York I was made supervising auditor. Then came other investigations. I was meeting men of big money and most of the time as their guest. I was sent to the Masury firm and Mr. Masury liked me and offered me $5,000 a year. Mr. Masury and I became more than employer and employee."

We were friends and it was the usual thing to go out to lunch together. COCKTAILS FIRST LURED HIM TO DESTRUCTION.

"First I started with the cocktails. Then I added a few drinks of wine, then a cold bottle, and finally our luncheon became for me a time when responsibility would fall from my shoulders and I would go off and do anything with Mr. Masury. He was paying the bills. He was that sort. He wouldn't let you spend a cent. He never knew that I was being harmed."

"Then came days when Mr. Masury would leave me at luncheon. I started spending my own money. The cocktails were diminishing my perspective so that I no longer regulated my expenditures to my income. I just drank as much wine as I liked, did Broadway at night from one end of the lights to the other. It was only at the end of the month when the bills came up that I got a scare, but a drink or two soon fixed that. I always paid the bills."

"I had started a poultry venture down at Elizabeth. It was eating up money. I suddenly began to realize that the cost of the Broadway life was getting ahead of my salary. The chauffeurs who had been hiring cars to me may have noticed some of my difficulty. I began drinking heavily. My God! I shall never forget the way I was swept from my feet at the first thought of robbery. Then a few drinks eased that. When a man is on the brink of crime a devil is always handy to give a gentle push."

"It was after the crime was committed came the awful moments. All I got amounted to about $300, but the bloodsuckers were upon me and I was at the mercy of men who knew my secret. It cost me thousands of dollars and I never knew a moment's peace until I confessed."

"I am going to prison at peace with God, determined some day to make up for the suffering of every one in this case. The terrible thing is that my wife must suffer. If I could take the burden from her shoulders and the shoulders of other relatives who have been dependent upon me I would be happy. My wife is a noble, Christian woman and I am heart-broken in drinking I forgot her."

White White in his cell rejects her having made a clean breast of his crime, his wife sits in her Elizabeth, N. J., home trying to formulate plans for the future in which she will be alone with her two small children. "I have forgiven Philip," she said to-day. "Indeed, I have greater confidence in him than ever. He failed as many a good man has failed—but he has repented and I know there was no crime in his heart. Some day we'll be together again and happy and live down all this."

"The children and I will get along. I am not afraid. I am well and they are strong, hearty children. I am facing the future hopefully."

Until White whispered to her as he entered Justice Aspinall's courtroom yesterday that he had prayed all night and intended to confess, Mrs. White believed absolutely in his innocence.

White seems almost as much relieved today over confessing his disreputable life as he was over confessing his part in crime. His wife knew nothing of his doings in the Tenderloin until the trial.

"I thought his life was an open book," she said after his confession. She denied that she had any part in knowing about that confession or knowing that there was anything to confess.

Following White's confession the men who were State's witnesses against him—Robert A. Roberts, Benjamin Moore and Thomas Daily—went before Justice Aspinall and pleaded guilty to charges of attempted burglary in the third degree. All were remanded until next Wednesday for sentence and were continued on bail.

"This case represents the finest bit of detective work in Brooklyn in twenty-five years," Judge Aspinall said in commending Detectives George Conroy and Walter E. Seims, who secured the evidence in the case.

WOMAN SEEKS DEATH TWICE IN ONE DAY

Gas Filled and Mrs. Schwartz, Taken to Hospital, Leaped From Window.

After trying to kill herself with gas at her home, No. 747 Courtlandt Avenue, the Bronx, Mrs. Maude Schwartz, twenty-seven years old, crept out of Lehigh Hospital and leaped from the crest of a forty-foot bluff at the edge of the hospital grounds. She landed on the Westchester Avenue sidewalk.

Mrs. Schwartz was removed to the hospital yesterday morning, suffering from gas poisoning. Her second attempt at suicide was at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It is said at the hospital to-day that she will probably die.

Mrs. Schwartz has been suffering from melancholia for some time, her husband told the police.

MRS. CAULFIELD DIES SUDDENLY IN HOTEL

Well-Known Actress of Child Parts Succumbs to Acute Indigestion.

Mrs. Anna Caulfield, the original tough girl in "Hogan's Alley," and well known in the theatrical profession for her portrayal of child parts, died today about 4 A. M. of acute indigestion, at the Hotel Normandie, Thirty-eighth Street and Broadway.

With her husband, Ward W. Caulfield, Mrs. Caulfield, who was known on the stage as Anna Driver, visited friends last night until after midnight, when they returned to the hotel. At 2 o'clock Mrs. Caulfield was taken ill. The efforts of two doctors proved unavailing.

Mrs. and Mr. Caulfield have a son, thirteen. The funeral will be held from the home of retired Battalion Chief John H. How, Mrs. Caulfield's brother-in-law, No. 11 Third Avenue. The last engagement Mrs. Caulfield played was Sunday night, when, as Caulfield and Driver, they appeared at the Grand Opera House.

These Girls Favorable Court Order. Supreme Court Justice Hendricks today issued an order that Harry K. Thaw be taken from the Tombs to the Rector's room in the Criminal Courts Building every day to confer with his counsel. Thaw's lawyers found the Tombs unsatisfactory for daily conferences with their client, and an appeal to Justice Hendricks resulted in the order to-day.
